RWS Scopes, mounts, etc.

RWS Airgun Scopes

RWS airguns are equipped with a scope rail for scope mounting. Installing a scope is a simple process requiring a set of rings (also referred to as a scope mount) and the scope. RWS airguns, including barrel cocking and side cocking models, occasionally require an adjustable mount. Most airguns will also need a Scope Stop if it is not built into the mount.

Regular rifle scopes are not recommended for use on airguns as they are not designed to withstand the unique recoil produced by airguns and usually will not focus at typical airgun distances and many do not have the elevation and windage adjustment range that airgunners often expect. Airgun scopes, however, are more durable than "regular" scopes and may also be used on everything from .22 rimfire to magnum centerfire rifles.

All RWS airgun scopes are covered by an RWS limited Lifetime Warranty. All are 1" tube and use standard airgun mounts from RWS and others. RWS Airgun Scopes have standard adjusting knobs for windage and elevation. Non-reflective matte finish. The adjustable objective for precise focus at all distances from as close as 7.5 yds. The RWS M350 Compact scope is prefocused for use from 10m to infinity.
