Cleaning & Maintenance

Cleaning & Maintenance - basics

Quality airguns require only a little routine maintenance, however, proper care is important. - use all lubricants sparingly. Improper lubricants or usage can cause damage to seals and cause dieseling if introduced into the air compression chamber. Always follow the manufacturer's instructions. DO NOT allow regular oils to enter the Air Compression Chamber - use only approved lubricants.

Cleaning Kits are for the barrel and outside - Maintenance Kits are for the inside of the airgun. The ZipClean Kit is designed to work with all calibers to .25

For external use appropriate lubricants for joints and linkages. Rust protection can be provided by MP5 or similar oil and a good Silicone Cloth.

Recommended airgun lubricants and cleaners may be used as required, and as they are often used a drop at a time they cost very little per application last a long time

M-2-M MOLY PASTE

(BEE9130) is over 60% moly for lubricating external moving joints and other areas. Generally too slippery for use on triggers.

OIL APPLICATOR NEEDLES

(BEE9110P) Hollow stainless steel needles which screw onto lubricant bottles to reach difficult areas. Each product should have its own needle. Use with Spring Oil, Ultra Lube, Chamber Oil, RWS Spring Oil and Chamber Oil - Two per package.

Beeman Cleaning & Maintenance

Beeman suggests little or no lubrication in the instructions which accompany their current airguns. Instead, they prefer that the airgun be returned to them after a period of years for lubrication and checking.

They no longer offer cleaning kits with a rigid rod. The BEE9005 Zip Clean Kit with its pull-thru rod is a designed for effective cleaning of all airguns including match rifles and pistols.
